FOR REPRESENTATIVE

Columbia voters should appreciate at this critical time in the town's history the importance of electing the right man as representative.

Certain qualifications the representative should have. He should be of unquestioned honesty, of ability to accomplish real results, sober, clean-minded, holding office as a public trust. His highest interest should be in serving the whole people, not a factional group, in building up the University, the town and the county, not in tearing them down.

Vote for Columbia tomorrow.

"CULTURED" BUTTERMILK

Buttermilk that was never near a churn nor ever had any part in buttermaking!

No longer are the lovers of buttermilk dependant upon the old-fashioned churned variety for their supply.

Scientific methods have done much for the development of dairy products, and a made-to-order buttermilk is one of its achievements.

Buttermilk-making has not been taken out of the hands of Nature, but the hands of nature have been trained to do the job by a new method.

Germes are used in this machine-made buttermilk. "Pure culture starters" are put into the sweet milk. Enough cream to produce the desired showing of butter fat is used. And the product is the cream of the by-product of churning in tanks, quality, beneficial results and satisfaction of consumers.

Cleanliness is another of the qualities of this commercial buttermilk.

FINANCIAL ILLUSIONS

Few theories in regard to the problems of war have been able to hold against the wild onslaught of the unprecedented conflict in Europe. Of those to fall are some formed by old and wise bankers, who are supposed to be pretty good prophets. Based on seemingly solid foundations several financial theories have become mere illusions.

It was held that the chief bankers of the world could prevent a war between nations by refusing to lend their governments money for preparation and carrying on of war. This would have been a good theory had the nations asked their bankers about the matter but they didn't.

Another pet notion was that there was not enough money to prosecute such a war. This theory was based on the figures obtained from the previous wars, such as our Civil War, when, toward the end, about $2,000,000 a day was the cost to the Government. The resources, however, of the nations involved have increased in such leaping bounds that the unthought of expenditure of $25,000,000 a day by one nation for war can be easily supported. The present indication is that lack of money will not stop the war.

Still others held that the vast systems of international trade and exchange could be so firmly organized that nothing would throw them into confusion. This theory was soon banished. The whole matter of commerce has had to be reorganized along different lines.

The authorities who realize this state of uncertainty say that to predict conditions after the war is not wise.

The New Books

"The European Anarchy."

Those who heard S. Lowes Dickinson's convincing and altogether charming lecture at the University of Missouri will welcome his discussion of "The European Anarchy." The book is an attempt to give in broad outline a just estimate of the European system or rather the European anarchy, with especial reference to the underlying causes of the war and the possibilities of a movement toward better things in the future. Naturally the discussion takes Germany for its center—her expansion, what was legitimate in all this and what was disastrous, the sinister influence of Bismarck and Bismarck's success ousting the old generous idealism of 1848 by a Machiavellianism as divorced from the real needs of human nature as any romanticism could be. At the same time it is recognized that the fundamental interests of the European nations demand a United Europe, and wherever the past is criticized it is in the hope of reconstruction for the future.

BOMBS DAMAGE MENACE PLANT

Three Are Set Off Near Presses of Anti-Catholic Newspaper.

By United Press.
AURORA, Mo., July 31.—The presses of the Menace, an anti-Catholic newspaper, were slightly damaged Saturday by the explosion of three bombs. No one was injured, although the night watchman was in the building at the time.

The bombs had been placed under the floor, which was badly damaged, and some loose newspaper was set on fire by the explosion. The firemen put the blaze out before it had time to spread.

No arrests had been made up to noon today. Feeling ran high after the attempt to destroy the Menace plant. The damage was estimated at about $1,000. The presses had just completed a run of this week's Menace when the bombs exploded.

ADMIRAL WINSLOW IS RETIRED

Hero of War With Spain Quits Navy at Required Age of 62.

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, July 31.—Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow, commander of the Pacific fleet, one of the Navy's old seadogs and incidentally, one of its richest men, retired from active service Saturday on his sixty-second birthday—that being the statutory age for retirement.

Rear Admiral Winslow's wealth—he married a daughter of the Sugar King, Havemeyer—never interfered with his service. He did a lot of work.

Included was the feat of taking the battleship New Hampshire right up to its wharf at New York, without the aid of any help but his channel sense. This, by the way, was termed by Admiral Goodrich, his superior officer—Winslow then was a captain—as the finest piece of seamanship he ever saw.

Admiral Winslow was boosted five numbers in rank when as Lieutenant C. McR. Winslow he cut the cables in Cienfuegos Harbor, Cuba, during the war with Spain—with the Spaniards firing from a distance of 150 yards.

In this engagement a marine was killed and nine men—including Lieutenant C. McR. Winslow—wounded. Winslow was wounded in the hand. His promotion came when he was recommended for "extraordinary heroism."

Winslow and his men went out in sail and motor launches. Winslow was in charge. With the big guns on the ships out in the harbor firing at the cable office—they wrecked it before Winslow reached shore—Winslow went into the face of a Spanish bombardment. He got by with it in excellent shape—some casualties reported, but the work done.

Admiral Winslow has done a lot of sea duty. He has done some land duty, too—enough to be known to New Yorkers for his stay as supervisor of New York Harbor in 1909, 1910 and 1911, and to those at Newport, R. I., when he was at the naval war college in 1904.

At the time of his retirement Winslow was a full admiral, being entitled to that rank by virtue of his command of the Pacific fleet. He served as a member of the Slocum commission when the burning of the New York excursion steamer was investigated.

Winslow was born in Washington in 1854. He was appointed to the Naval Academy by the President in 1870, and graduated in 1875.

WILL NOT TAKE EXTRA PAY

On Theory That He Does Not Deserve More, Boy Scout Refuses Money.

Old Diogenes no doubt was seeking a desirable thing when he set out with his lantern. He should have called himself a scout-master and started a company of Boy Scouts. Athens soon would have supplied all Greece with honest men.

But to add a little local color to strengthen this premise: Recently some Columbians needed a boy to run an errand. It wasn't a particularly easy one, either. A boy who was riding along the street on a bicycle was called in. He soon returned, delivered the large package and started to leave. The Columbians tried to give him some money—they were really a little liberal—but the boy wouldn't take it. Finally the boy was persuaded to take a nickel for his work, but was firm in refusing anything more.

The Columbians marvelled and asked him why he wouldn't take the money—it had been hard work and he had earned it, they contended.

"Yes," the boy agreed, "it was hard work, but I haven't earned that much money and I don't want to take it. You see I've got to learn to be a Boy Scout some day."

BARMAID SAVES EMPLOYER FINE

Quick Wit Escapes Trouble With British Anti-Treating Law.

By United Press.

LONDON, July 31.—The quick wit of a London barmaid saved her employer a heavy fine today when two detectives attempted an arrest under the anti-treating law.

"Two quarts of beer, please, miss," ordered one of the men as the pair sat down at a table in the "pub."

The barmaid brought the beer, accepted the detective's money and was about to turn away when the sleuth arose with a triumphant smile.

"Now I've caught you, haven't I?" "Not on your life," was the quick come-back. "You ordered two quarts of beer and got them. Now you drink them."

Then, turning to the other detective, she asked "What's yours?"

ADVENTURES IN BUYING IN COLUMBIA

No. 7 of a Series

THIS story is said to have happened in a small town in Arkansas but it serves to illustrate this experience in "Buying in Columbia."

A little boy carrying a coal oil can went up to the proprietor of a general store to have the can refilled. The proprietor was dozing on an empty box in front of the store. The little boy stood around a while and finally touched the man's arm to attract his attention. The man awoke with a start and demanded the youngster's business. After the boy had told him he wanted a gallon of coal oil, the store keeper grabbed the can and as he started for the rear of the store grumbled:

"It's darn funny that nobody in this town can sell coal oil but me."

A man who has lived in Columbia for the last two years and who moved here from an adjoining state said the thing that impressed him about several Columbia stores was the lack of attention that customers receive when they enter the store. He then recited several experiences he had had when he had entered the front door of stores. He had been forced to wait several minutes before anybody noticed him and in one or two cases he had stood for some time and then left the store in disgust. At one place he had waited exactly five minutes and then finally the proprietor of the store yelled from the back:

"Did you want something?"

"No," I answered, "I made a mistake and got in the wrong place."

In these times of sharp competition, trade goes where it is invited and made welcome. A merchant would not treat a friend, or even a stranger in this way if the call was made in his own home. Hospitality should extend to the store as well as the home.

The Missourian's purpose in printing these experiences is to improve retailing in Columbia. The Missourian would like to hear from merchants as well as customers on this subject. Address letters to
